The legal basis for education in Tennessee is expressed in the state Constitution and state statutes, as interpreted by the courts. Boards are instruments of the state, and members of the Board are state officers representing local citizens and the state in the management of the public schools.¹

The governing body shall be the Board of Education, serving residents within the boundaries of the school system and non-residents under conditions specified by state law and the Board.²

All powers of the Board lie in its action as a group; therefore, individual board members exercise their authority over school system affairs only as they vote to take action at an official meeting of the Board.

In other instances, an individual board member, including the chairman, shall have power only when specified by state law or when the Board, by vote, has delegated authority to him/her.

It is expressly understood and agreed that all functions, rights, powers or authority of the administration of the School District and the Board of Education which are not specifically limited by the express language of any negotiated contract are retained by the Board provided, however, that no such right shall be exercised so as to violate any of the specific provisions of any negotiated contract.
